

Relocation Assistance Credit for Employees (RACE) Pilot Program

To address the challenge of New York City post-pandemic office vacancy and accelerate the city's recovery, the City has developed the Race for Space: A Comprehensive Strategy to Revitalize NYC Office Space. As part of this plan, the City has developed the Relocation Assistance Credit for Employees (RACE) pilot program to attract new firms and jobs to office buildings that have struggled with tenancy and investment.

RACE will support meaningful relocations of non-New York based companies to jumpstart leasing in older office stock by:

- Increasing the city's employment base (up to 3,000 new jobs directly supported by the program)
- Driving additional foot traffic in the central business districts to storefronts
- Stabilizing the office market and the long-term potential risk of vacancy to City property tax revenues

Job Attraction and Economic Engine

The program is designed to cost no more than $150M and generate an estimated $385M in return to the City.

RACE Incentive

- For a three-year period, provide an annual $5,000 benefit per employee relocated from out of state for 10 years ($38,600 NPV) for relocations to the city (an effective ~$20/SF rent discount¹)
- Cap program benefits at $150M total to limit cost overruns and incentivize first movers to take up the program
- Limit the program to the first 3,000 employees enrolled (with a cap of 500 employees per firm) to limit the overall spend of the program going to single firms/deals

City Benefit

- Preliminary Return to City analysis suggests a 2.6x return on investment
- Per every 100 direct employees supported by this program, the City can expect a spillover effect of 96 indirect and induced employees

¹Benefit corresponding to supported employees for standard office job density (1 per 175 SF)
